ON THE SPUR OF THE MOMENT

Q. Is it proper to put awnings on your house if it has a northern exposure?

A. The conventional rules or ceremonial observed by polite society are that you may put awnings on your house with the northern exposure. This will show that you care nothing about money.

Q. Is it proper to bow to your brother who is regulating traffic on Fifth avenue while motoring with a gentleman friend?

A. The observance of the proprieties required by good breeding permit you to bow to your brother even if he were going to be hung.

Q. Would you advise sending a young girl to Paris for the finishing touches to her education?

A. It will probably "finish" her.—Marcel Steinbrugge.

A Texas judge divorced 212 couples in 245 minutes. He is wasting his remarkable talent out there. He should move East.

There seems to be a number of ladies who are willing to keep Mr. Stillman's press work right up to the minute.

We are glad to note that Bill Hart is coming back to the screen. Then we will be able to see at least one western gunman who doesn't look like a soda clerk.

If Stillman doesn't stay off the first page, some of the movie stars will be getting jealous.

Charles B. Towns, the anti-drug champion, spent some time in China several years ago with Samuel Merwin, the writer. In a Hong Kong shop window they noticed some Chinese house coats of particular striking designs and stepped in to purchase them.

Mr. Towns asked Mr. Merwin to do the bargaining.

"Wantum coatee," said Mr. Merwin to the sleepy-eyed Oriental who shuffled up with a grunt. He placed several of the coats before them.

"How muchee Melian monee?" inquired Mr. Merwin.

"It would aid me in transacting this sale," said the Chinaman, "if you would confine your language to your mother tongue. The coat is $7. Mr. Merwin took it.

MRS. JARLEY'S NEW "TAX WORKS" TO PORTRAY HIGH COST OF GOVERNMENT

An Exhibit in the "Tax Works" on the "Service-Progress Special" of the New York Central Lines

Everybody remembers "Mrs. Jarley's Wax Works," as described in "The Old Curiosity Shop." On the "Service-Progress Special," operated in response to requests from the American Farm Bureau Federation and the National Grange, will be a flat car devoted to setting forth present tax problems. This exhibit is known as "Mrs. Jarley's Tax Works" and consists of enormous wooden figures on the order of gigantic cartoons. For instance, there is "The Old Woman Who Lived in a Shoe." This familiar old lady "has so many taxes she doesn't know what to do." The "Tax Works" will tell a complete story of tax increases in the states to be visited by this special train—Ohio, Michigan, Indiana, Illinois, Pennsylvania, and New York.

There will also be huge models of State tax dollars with divisions showing the source from which taxes are levied and where the money goes.

The exhibit gives a most illuminating view of the consistent interest of Federal, State, County and local taxes.

Starting June 18th from Cleveland, O., the "Service-Progress Special" will be four months on its journey. During that time it will interest hundreds of thousands of people in the evolution of transportation, particularly in presenting authentic transportation facts to the agricultural population.

of Cleveland, named as Mr. Mrs. J. A. Emmert, and Louie Furr, visiting relatives here. Mr. and Mrs. Furr, children of Emmert's father's father, Mr. Furr, of night.

PESKY BED-BUGS

(Pesky Devils Outlets) P. D. Q. is the new chemical that puts the everlasting to the pesky bedbugs, roaches, fleas, ants and cockroaches—impossible for the pesky devils to exist where P. D. Q. is used.

Recommendations of Hotels, Hospitals, Railroad Companies and other public institutions are a guarantee to the public that the safety, quick and most economical way of ridding the pesky insects is by the use of P. D. Q., as this chemical kills the eggs as well as the live ones, and will not injure the clothing.

A 3c package makes a full quart, enough to kill a million bedbugs, roaches, fleas or cockroaches and also contains a patent sprayer to get the eggs into the hard-to-reach places and under the bed. P. D. Q. can also be purchased in sealed bottles.

TODAY'S RECIPES
Nut Bread—Mix in order named two and one-half cups flour, one-third cup light brown sugar, one-half teaspoon salt, three teaspoons baking powder, one cup nuts chopped fine, one well beaten egg and one cup milk. Bake forty-five minutes or longer.
Veal Birds—Cut slices of leg of veal into pieces about two by three inches; chop trimmings; add half their bulk of rolled cracker crumbs; season with salt, pepper and touch of onion juice and mix all with one well beaten egg. Place layer of this stuffing on piece of veal, roll into a "bird," fasten with tooth-pick and place in well buttered shallow baking dish. When all "birds" are placed, sprinkle with salt and flour, dot with butter, half cover with milk and bake slowly until tender.
Apple Tapioca—Prepare Pearl or Minute tapioca as for any occasion. When transparent remove from double boiler and place over a layer of apples which have been sliced and sugared in the bottom of a buttered baking dish. Bake slowly until apples are done. Serve hot or cold, with or without sugar and cream.

Orange Flowers—Carefully tear orange peel downward from one end and then separate layers. Form flower. Serve to children in place of "deviled" eggs.

FRUIT SHERBETS FOR HOT DAYS
Orange Ice—Four cups water, two cups sugar, two cups orange juice, one-quarter cup lemon juice, grated rind two oranges; make syrup by boiling sugar and water twenty minutes; add grated rind; cool; add fruit juice; strain and freeze, using three measures ice to one of salt.
Frozen Pineapple—Add one pound and a half of sugar to one quart of water. Boil rapidly for ten minutes; then cool. When cold add the juice of two lemons and one quart of grated pineapple. Mix, turn into the freezer and freeze, stirring slowly. If canned or preserved pineapple is used allow only one pound of sugar.

Lemon Sherbet—Squeeze all the juice from six lemons and one large orange. Put into this the grated rind of the oranges and of three of the lemons, and let it steep for an hour. Strain in a bag, squeezing this hard, add two cups granulated sugar and one pint water. Mix well and put into a freezer. Turn until frozen, pack and let it stand for an hour before serving.

SUGGESTIONS
Potato Chips—Heat the potato chips in the oven for a few minutes. Then you will know they will not be soggy when served.

"Beating Well"—When you see the term "beat well" in a recipe, it means to beat until all the ingredients are thoroughly mixed together.

WEDDING SECRET 2 YEARS

CINCINNATI, June 29.—A secret marriage of two years ago was revealed today when Otto J. Palm, 2330 Ashland avenue, informed relatives that in September, 1921, he had married Miss Agnes Folhard, former professional dancer, and one time winter garden favorite in New York.

COUPLE FOUND GUILTY

CINCINNATI, June 29.—The jury in the case of Charles Langel

Sally Ann

Says—

"Bread Makes Sweet Tempers"

Is there a little fairy in your home given to cranks, so that much of the time you have scowls and sulks instead of smiles and sunshine? Give her Bread, more Bread. It's the food that makes such well-nourished bodies, little folks just have to act pleasant, because they feel pleasant. Bread is your Best Food—Eat More of it!

SALLY ANN BREAD

—The Bread that tastes so good you keep eating and eating. And every crumb gives health and energy.

TODAY'S RECIPES
Asparagus Delight—Place individual serving of warm asparagus in lettuce leaf. Garnish with slices of hard boiled egg. Add a slice of tomato and a few green peas, also serve with Thousand Is. dressing.
Potato Chips—Slice potatoes very thin and put in cold water. Drain and put in hot greased pan in oven. Watch continually. When brown, remove and salt. This method has been found the best for well flavored crisp potato chips. It takes a comparatively short time to make.
Plantation Cake—One cup molasses, one-half cup melted butter, two eggs beaten, one-half cup warm water or milk, one-half cup whole wheat flour, one-half teaspoon allspice, one teaspoon soda, two cups flour, one teaspoon ginger, one orange. Pour molasses in bowl, add butter, eggs, soda dissolved in liquid, flour sifted with spices, and grated and strained slices of orange. Mix and turn in a well greased and floured shallow cake pan and bake in moderate oven thirty-five minutes. Take from oven, brush with melted butter, sprinkle with sugar mixed with cinnamon, and return to oven for five minutes.
Pineapple Surprise—Cut fresh pineapple in rings. Remove outer cover and then cut out core in center. Place two thin slices, on a lettuce leaf, sugar well and let stand. Then sprinkle freely with shredded coconut. Decorate with two nut halves (walnut or pecan). This may be eaten with the angel cake.
Three-Egg Angel Food Cake—One cup sugar, one and one-third cups flour, one-half teaspoon cream of tartar, three teaspoons baking powder, one-third teaspoon salt. Mix well and sift four times the above dry ingredients. Add two-thirds cup scalded milk while still warm, beating continually. Add one teaspoon almond or vanilla flavoring. Mix well and fold in three egg whites beaten until light. Turn into ungreased angel cake tin and bake in slow oven forty-five minutes.
Iceing—Add one-half teaspoon butter to two tablespoons hot milk. Add gradually one and one-half cups confectioner's sugar. Add one-half teaspoon flavoring (same as used in cake).
SUGGESTIONS
To Keep Egg Yolks—Very often you find that you have egg yolks left for which you have no immediate use. By boiling them hard the yolks keep and you can grate them over a salad, creamed salmon or a baked fish.
For Perspiring Hands—If your hands perspire a great deal when sewing, keep a small tin of bran in your work-basket and rub it into your hands when they become damp. Wipe off the dust with towel.

NEW GREEN APPLES ON ELYRIA MARKET
 The housewife will find plenty of green stuff and fruit for the table on the market this week, but there are few new offerings.
 New green apples appeared for the first time this morning, being shipped in from Tennessee.
 The recent rain has helped the berry market. It is expected that strawberries will last for another week. The price at present ranges around 10c to 12c per quart, and most of them are of fine quality.
 Cherries will soon be a drug on the market although they are selling for 12c a quart at present. There is an immense crop just ripening and the price is expected to be considerably lower during the coming week.
 Large fine tomatoes, the best so far this season are at all the stores with cucumbers, lettuce, new cabbage, carrots, onions, peas and beans, all of good quality.
 The fish market and meat supply is up to standard with no difference in prices from last week.

FAIR WE
 Neyna McMein, now Mrs. John Baragwanath.
 Neyna McMein, creator of fascinating magazine covers, is on the Atlantic bound for Paris. But not as Neyna McMein. For she was married to John Baragwanath, mining engineer, just before sailing. Her husband is on his way to Newfoundland when he will join his bride in Paris.
MANY APPLICATIONS
 LORAIN, June 29.—Thus far there have been 171 applications for a license under the new soft drink ordinance. Of this number 105 have been given a license, and 17 rejected. The balance have not been acted on. The ordinance goes into effect July 3.

"A Real Opportunity"
 The largest financial institution of its kind is always glad to get in touch with men who are capable of representing it in the field.
 Above-the-average men are required, but in return, an above-the-average opportunity is offered.
 Our field men are guaranteed a starting salary sufficient to meet their living demands, while added commissions are paid from the start. The average salary of our agents is higher than that paid in almost any kindred line of salesmanship. Wage increases are automatic, while the job ahead is always open, due to a policy of rapid promotion on merit.
 Working conditions are particularly agreeable—thorough instruction, a considerable time out-of-doors, annual vacations, sick leaves, free medical and hospital care for certain illnesses, group insurance, and opportunity to participate in a savings plan that earned over 9 percent in 1922. Applicants should be at least 25 years of age, preferably married, steadily employed and favorably known in their communities. Previous sales experience is an advantage, though not a requisite.

RAIN Plans To Extend Reid Ave.
 LORAIN, June 29.—Monday night the city council will be asked to widen West Erie avenue to widen Reid street. At the time they will also receive a petition to pass legislation for the installation of a street car loop on this route, thereby eliminating the present green line loop. The council will also be asked to extend Reid avenue from Fifth street to Reid street.
Plan New Car Schedule
 LORAIN, June 29.—Tomorrow evening the city council will hold a meeting with General Manager J. W. of the Lake Shore Electric, confer on a new schedule of street car fare for the city. This matter has been hanging fire for a long time, and it is hoped to have settled.

Do Your Meals Square Off Well?
 We know people do not like to eat things just because they are good for them; but when the benefit is backed up with good taste—it's different.
 There would not be much satisfaction sitting down to the best of meals without the real foundation of wholesome, tasty bread.
 Brownie's bread is good for you and has a delicious taste too. We mix it right, we bake it right, we serve it right. Everything in it is pure and the quality is uniform.
 Don't try to square off a meal without it.

PERIODS IN FURNITURE

GREAT INFLUENCE TODAY

Knowledge of Their Relation Necessary for the Successful Planning of a Harmonious Modern Home.

In the general awakening to the importance of better homes the need for a background of understanding of the past becomes apparent. If costly and discouraging mistakes are to be avoided, some knowledge of the intimate relation between the artistic and the practical in furnishing and decoration of the principles of harmony and design and the manner in which they are carried out must be acquired. Furnishing and decorating a home so that it will be at once comfortable, artistic and livable is an undertaking of no little consequence. It requires good sense, taste and at least a recognition of the principles by which the master craftsmen of furniture have worked.

In the evolution of the better American home, the home-maker will not go far in her study of her plan before she begins to realize the part which the so-called "periods" has played in making the home a place of a higher significance than a mere roof over the head. Without going into an exhaustive study of the subject, she will soon come to understand that the different historical periods with which styles of furniture are associated have a relation to one another which bears directly on the well-balanced and harmonious whole of the successful home as it is understood today.

Jacobean the First Influence.
Going back historically the Jacobean is the earliest period whose direct influence is felt to any great extent in the furniture of today. It was a period of English furniture which extended roughly from 1603 to 1688, embracing the time from the accession of the Stuart family to the reign of the Dutch rulers, William and Mary. The name is derived from Jacobus, the Latin for James, the first of the Stuart line on the English throne. The king and his court and the nobility had an important influence on the designing and making of furniture. They were the patrons of the fine arts. The designer who received the royal favor had means and opportunity for the perfection of his work on the artistic side without the hampering of commercial considerations.

Articles of English furniture had been few in number and simple and solid in construction. It was not easy to get away from this influence in the direction of lighter, more graceful forms. Then, too, this period embraced the time of Cromwell with its Puritanical reaction against the ornamental. Still there followed a tendency later in the Jacobean period toward forms of more grace and beauty. It was a time of conflicting influences in history and it is not to be wondered at that wide variations exist in the styles which are grouped under the name Jacobean.

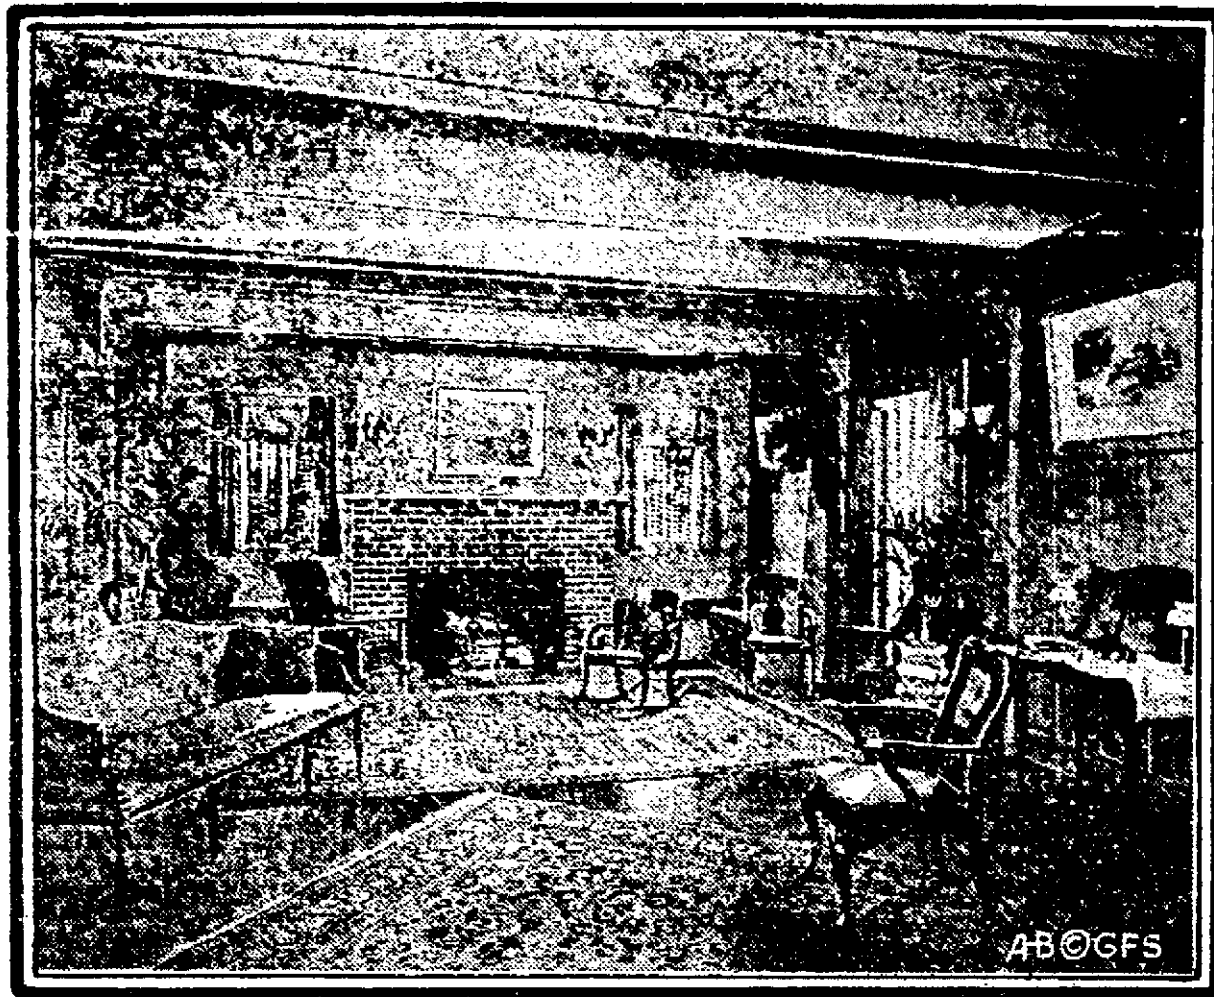

As might be expected, the furniture of that time was solid, thick and heavy—sometimes even clumsy. The practical, hardy life of the people as reflected in simple forms, which were for the greater part rectangular. Mechanical construction was strong and good. Oak was the wood most employed in the early Jacobean period and oak does not lend itself readily to other than simple forms. Cabinets were in general use and their broad surfaces were ornamented freely with heavy carving. Later in the period, in the time of Charles II, spiral twists and scroll treatments appeared on members of the pieces of furniture, as well as carving on the broad surfaces.

A distinctive article of the Jacobean period was the chair. The early type was a chair of wood throughout with a flat, rectangular seat and straight back having but little rake. Evidently ease was not much considered. Straight lines and right angles prevailed.

After the Restoration, when Charles II came to the English throne, forms began to deviate from the straight and the rectangular. From France and scrolls from the Flemish appeared. Arched front stretchers and high, narrow backs were motifs seen in chairs. The gateleg table is a form which has come down to us from this time almost unchanged. Sideboards, developed from the cabinets or cupboards of that day, had their beginning. Jacobean furniture seems to have been particularly adaptable to the dining room and more of its motifs are used in the dining room today than in any other form of use. The settee is another article of furniture favored for Jacobean reproduction. Successions of square and round forms in the legs of chairs, spiral twists, half feet, arched backs and carved stretchers are characteristics of the Jacobean style, which are used and may be recognized today. Naturally this early style had little immediate influence on American furniture. The few settlers in America at this time were too busy fighting Indians and cutting down forests to pay much attention to the refinements of home.

William and Mary Influence.
The William and Mary period, in spite of the shortness of their reign in England, from 1689 to 1702, was well defined during the rule of the Dutch king and queen. Usually the new manners of life. But it was a revolution in their taking up of new ideas in furniture in this brief period.

Combining Period Styles

Political conditions were becoming more settled and the English had more time to turn their attention to the refinements of living. With the new rulers came a following of the Dutch nobility who had no intention of adopting foreign manners. New varieties of furniture were introduced. Among them were the highboy and the lowboy, which were in their origin but a chest set on legs. The straight lines and angles of the Jacobean period began to give way to curves and softer contours. A variety of cabinets, cupboards and desks appeared. Comfort began to be considered as a factor of design. Furniture became more inviting and hospitable. With the adoption of curves and gentler outlines of design, the heavy carving of the Jacobean period disappeared, the furniture of the time depending for its beauty more on line than on outward decoration. This appeared in arches or semi-circles rising from horizontal rails.

Characteristics. To use a homely expression in the Queen Anne period chairs became bow-legged. Carved feet, lattice backs and ornamental stretchers are distinctive features. The backs of chairs began to be curved to conform to the form of the occupant. During this period mahogany as a material for furniture came into general use. The nature of mahogany explains to some extent the adoption of shaped members of furniture, as it adapted itself to working so much more readily than oak or walnut. It is contemporary with the coming of more settled conditions in the American colonies, extending from 1702 to 1750.

Enter the Chippendale.
Flourishing during the time of the kings George II and George III was a style, more than a period, known as the Chippendale, which exerted a lasting influence on English and American furniture building. Thomas Chippendale was a good craftsman and his furniture was structurally sound. He carried on the lighting of form and enhancement of grace in furniture which had gained way in the preceding periods. Under his guiding hand, new and distinctive forms were evolved. About this time mahogany began to be imported into England in great quantities and its popularity for furniture grew apace. Chippendale favored it on account of its greater flexibility to curved forms. Chippendale's models are classed into the English, French, Chinese and Gothic modes. His English models appear to be outgrowths of the William and Mary and the early Georgian periods. Chippendale fell a victim to the sensuous charm of the Louis XV fashion then prevailing in France. His use of rococo decorations perhaps was carried too far. Chippendale took Chinese motifs, introduced by Chambers, an architect, and incorporated them into his furniture designs. These consist in the main of lattices in chair backs, of the pagoda in carved feet motifs and frets in chair legs and table aprons.

Chippendale models included chairs, tables, secretaries, sofas and

The Decorative Qualities of Furniture of This Period and Its Suitability for the American Home Is Widely Appreciated.

Single and double hoods appeared on chair backs and on highboys and lowboys. A characteristic motif of the period was the cup leg, showing the form of an inverted cup turned in the legs of furniture. Shaped stretchers between the legs of chairs and cabinets forming a curved X replaced the straight stretchers of the period before. The dominating line of the period took on the shape of the oval, a double curve. Chairs, cupboards, tables, desks and cabinets took on the form of the new style. Not so much change was required in adapting the furniture of William and Mary to the needs of today.

Some of the distinctive forms of the William and Mary period are the cup legs, trumpet-shaped legs, bun-shaped feet, octagonal legs, curved stretchers and arched backs. The William and Mary style probably is the first to exert a marked immediate effect on American ideas of furniture.

Queen Anne Period.
Following the William and Mary period came that of Queen Anne. Its chief service to English furniture is said to have been in liberating the furniture of England from the hard, severe outlines of the Jacobean period. For purposes of classification, the period of Queen Anne furniture is supposed to embrace the reigns of the three rulers, Queen Anne, George I and George II. Extension of the use of curved outlines is a dominant note. The fiddle back of a chair and the free use of the cabriole-shaped are other decided characteristics.

man and his furniture was structurally sound. He carried on the lighting of form and enhancement of grace in furniture which had gained way in the preceding periods. Under his guiding hand, new and distinctive forms were evolved. About this time mahogany began to be imported into England in great quantities and its popularity for furniture grew apace. These consist in the main of lattices in chair backs, of the pagoda in carved feet motifs and frets in chair legs and table aprons.

Chippendale is best known for his chair designs, of which he originated a number of distinctive types. Chairs following the various types mentioned came from his hand. His chairs were graceful and well proportioned and the item of personal comfort was well provided for. It is said there is hardly a model of his making which did not include as a motif the form of the letter C. Rivalry even suggested that it was used beds. The Chinese fretwork or lattice motif was employed not only in chair backs, but by saving out thin strips of wood and applying them to other members of his designs. The brackets under seat rails are a familiar example. Chippendale designs were applied to sofas and cabinets and in less degree to bedroom furniture.

Heppelwhite, Adam and Sheraton.
During the last quarter of the Eighteenth century the three styles of furniture manufacture known as Heppelwhite, Adam and Sheraton flourished in England side by side. Chippendale's long and fruitful career was drawing to a close as Adam and Heppelwhite came upon the scene. The Sheraton school came somewhat later. Both Heppelwhite and Sheraton were first furniture designers, while the Adam brothers were architects and never built a piece of furniture. Adam patrons often asked the brothers to design furniture, and in so doing they established a design of furniture which has taken their name.

Heppelwhite carried on the idea of light and graceful furniture which had become firmly established before him. English households had become urgent in their demands for elegance in furniture. Heppelwhite is said to have been influenced by the classic elegance of the Louis Seize school of France. For the sake of associating the Heppelwhite vogue with a date in American history, it was about the time of the revolution in the colonies.

ECONOMICS OF THE OWNED HOME

Building of Small Houses Vital to National Welfare.

MAKES BETTER CITIZENS

Home Ownership Raises Self Respect and Responsibility and Materially Benefits Community in Many Ways.

Hendrik Van Loon in his history of mankind, after reviewing all the phases of statescraft, industry and religion that have influenced the making of our race and civilization what it is today, and after recording the influence of various leaders in military, scientific and literary achievements, says, Rembrandt, Beethoven and Rodin are the prophets and leaders of the race. "A world without art and happiness is like a nursery without laughter." In other words, art in its various forms has been the liberator of the race. No civilization can exist without art. But of all the various phases of art, that of the small house and its contents and surroundings is most difficult to achieve, yet most vital to a happy life and a satisfactory community or nation.

A beautiful home has the power to attract attention, improve conduct, compel respect, bind families and friends together, form communities, found states and create nations. Men and women reared in and among beautiful homes acquire good taste from them and seldom if ever do a very ugly thing. Good home making involves all the high arts and produces the most happiness for us all.

Home Owners Best Citizens.
The small homes are just as important or more important than large homes from a moral, economic and patriotic point of view. The building of homes is a matter of most vital concern to the welfare of a nation. Homeless citizens and families, whether rich or poor, are not potentially the best citizens. A citizen with a rent receipt and a foreigner with a passport have similar uninterested and irresponsible mental attitudes toward the community, town or state. Carelessness and extravagance taught to children and adults by the use of property not their own is a tremendous economic and moral loss. There are now about sixty per cent of the people of our country living in rented homes and apartments.

There is no valuable sentiment in rented houses and apartments. There is no national economy or individual economy in rent paying; on the other hand, every individual home owner makes an additional credit possibility, creates an additional property security to the nation's wealth and an additional urge for all other forms of permanent construction.

Remove Building Hazards.
Civic bodies and legislatures should diligently work to remove all unnecessary hindrances or hazards to the individual home building instinct such as fire loss, difficult and complicated real estate transfers, uncertain values due to unwarranted changes in the use of real estate through lack of zoning laws and city plans, monopolistic and price fixing material and labor conditions and labor disputes.

"To incline a series of laws towards encouraging home building is less sentimental than practical and fundamental; in fact, all beneficial laws may well be tested by the one question: "Do they tend to make more and better homes?" for home ownership visualizes and substantiates the highest instincts of man and leads the strongest motive force we have—parenthood—to the noblest products of human energy and democratic citizenship.

Planting of shrubs and trees about the house, making the yard practically an outdoor living room and embellishing the street and immediate environment of the house are essential. So-called back yards should be considered things of the past and gardens should be substituted therefore.

Small House Best.
The house should be as small as possible consistent with comfort, convenience and reduction to the minimum of housework. Size and display do not make for happiness. The house should have good quality though less quantity. Nothing can be gained by way of comfort, durability or attractiveness from inferior construction. Since the cost of a house of good floor plan and exterior treatment does not increase in proportion to an increase in the size of rooms, therefore proper space for furniture and the expression of individuality and taste of the owner or occupant should not be sacrificed.

Open porches should be reduced to a minimum. Sun porches and sleeping rooms can be used as open porches in the summer and as habitable rooms in the winter. They are preferable to open porches.

Houses should be practically non-burnable and more than one stairway in a small house should be considered extravagant or useless. The prejudice against hard floors should be overcome and floors be built fireproof with a good attractive, non-absorbent finish, preferably of cement and stone or marble aggregate, capable of being ground smooth and polished.

Fireproofing is expensive. The writer has been able to show in two or three instances in recent years that the first and second floors of residences can be built fireproof in buildings whose walls are built of brick or other masonry material at a cost not exceeding 2½ per cent more than the cost of wood joists, wood floors and wood lath. In some instances buildings can be made fireproof in this manner without extra cost provided the architect and the builder understand how to use the modern reinforced concrete construction. A floor made of colored marbles and Portland cement, ground smooth and polished, is not only fireproof, but very sanitary, easy to clean, easy to repair, and will last for years without any expense for upkeep. The only objection is a prejudice against the hard floor, due to the association of marble or stone floors with damp and cold basements or rooms that have not been heated by modern methods. GROUPING OF PERIOD DESIGNS

Decorative Effects Through Combining Various Styles.

NOW MUCH IN VOGUE

Matched Furniture Now Often Preferred to Suites, Especially for the Living Room.

Combinational groupings of furniture for the living room are becoming more and more in vogue. This is especially true in the more pretentious and modern homes. Suites for the living room appear to have run their cycle. When the World War clouds gathered and broke, many furniture factories were making mostly English types and continued doing so during the European strife on account of wartime restrictions. Immediately following the overseas war, the English types were continued to be made on account of the boom in trade. Then came the slump and with it the urgent necessity for radical revisions not only to stimulate trade but to cover changes in price.

The shift was to the Italian and Spanish types of design, which, for two years, have seemed to predominate. Improved business conditions appear to now demand another radical revision and the tendency of the furniture designers is back to the English and a revival of the Colonial, which for several years has not been in high popular favor.

While strictly period designs are being shown, combinations are beginning to predominate, with walnut and mahogany the favorite woods.

Furniture of various period designs, when combined in harmonious groupings, creates a delightful, homey environment. In continuation to the popular idea that only suites bring pleasing arrangement and decorative effect, a living room furnished with such period combinations offers a new atmosphere and delightful distinction.

In such groupings of walnut and mahogany furniture the pieces seem to have a greater individuality and they may be arranged with a view to getting the utmost in comfort and beauty.

Five Individual Groups.
The writer recently saw a room arranged and furnished after this manner. In it were to be counted five individual groupings, with as many different designs or periods represented. The scene was delightfully different on account of its individuality, yet, as a whole, restful, attractive and offering hospitable welcome. It appeared natural, as though the pieces had grouped themselves to create the satisfying atmosphere and environment.

The first grouping was about the fireplace which was beautified by a Renaissance mirror with floral panel and gold carved frame, the latter repeating the scroll motif of the mantel. Besides the fireplace two Jacobean chairs, with cane backs and seats, gave further distinction to the setting.

Forming the second grouping in the middle of the room and facing the fireplace, in which the interest naturally centered, was a davenport, the feet of which showed a Queen Anne motif, supported by an Italian Renaissance table. Before this stood a cane-bottomed stool. The davenport end tables also repeated the Renaissance design.

As one entered the room, in the left foreground was an occasional setting, an easy chair, an octagonal table of modern adaptation, enhanced by brocade seat and vase. To the left of this grouping was another, in strong but pleasing contrast, which had been arranged at the side of the broad windows. It contained a cabinet secretary made in walnut which is so desirable for present-day living rooms because it can be closed to conceal the contents when not in use. Copyright, American Homes Bureau.

SAVING LINOLEUM

The housewife who treats with but a step over the surface of her kitchen floor newly covered with linoleum, notices within a month or two that it is beginning to show signs of wear. Parts of the pattern are wearing away, the color may be changing or the surface is spotting, somewhat depending upon the frequency with which it is scrubbed. What might have been done—if anything—to preserve the linoleum? According to the Institute of Paint and Varnish research of Washington, which has recently reported on a series of tests the entire difficulty may be overcome by the use of varnish. Either a high-grade interior varnish or an all-purpose varnish should be used. A smooth, glossy finish is obtained by the application of two coats, allowing two days for drying between coats.

Linoleums thus treated were rubbed at 30 different times with various soaps and abrasive soap powders. Each sample was entirely unaffected, and the conclusion is inevitable that proper varnishing of linoleums should by no means be neglected. The varnish should be applied immediately after the linoleum is laid unless it is first desired to have it stretch to its permanent form on the floor. Copyright, American Homes Bureau.

One of the most diversified woods in the world is the increasingly popular red gum wood, which is being extensively used for furniture, church finish, hospitals,

Charming Fireplace Grouping

AVOID MANTEL DISPLAY.

Avoid "displaying" on the mantel all of your bric-a-brac for which you think that there is no other place handy and so spoil its effect. The eye can really "see" only a few things. That is why when you place an ornament away in a new place you really see and enjoy it. Try this. Take out everything. What a relief it is! Put away tiny things. Too numerous vases distribute on various tables. Now of all that remains, what is the most appropriate to place on a shelf over a fireplace? Ask yourself if the chosen object is beautiful in line, form and color, simple and possibly useful. It may be a pair of candlesticks. Have you one really beautiful vase or a clock for use between the candlesticks? Try paired objects or an odd number of ornaments, one or three, possibly more if you can arrange them in a balanced way. If what remains won't pass the test of good taste and you think less of using it, store it. Copyright, American Homes Bureau.

Colonial Four Poster

Something of the Hardy Spirit of Pioneer Days Is Reflected in the Almost Austere Beauty of This Bedroom.

Heppelwhite's designs were lighter than those of Chippendale. In distinction to the elaborate carvings of the latter, Heppelwhite depended upon the charm of proportion of his furniture members. He also applied painting, japanning and inlay for enrichment. In spite of their delicacy, the Heppelwhite designs, in most cases, were sound enough structurally to be of long service. The strength that he built along

WASHINGTON IS WINNER OF REGATTA

Dow Walling Pulls Wonderful Race, With Infected Knee, Then Collapses Just Over Finish Line

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., June 23.—Dow Walling, 21 year old hero of Washington's victorious eight winners of the annual intercollegiate regatta, was today suffering intense pain from the infected knee, which for three days pending the event, threatened to keep him in the hospital instead of at the stroke seat of the "huskies" shell.

Walling had to be lifted from the Washington boat at the finish of the race last evening when the western crew came in ahead of Navy, leading Columbia, Syracuse, Cornell and Pennsylvania in the order named.

The Washington crew was the "toast" of the town today. While considered a dangerous rival to formidable easterners, the invaders particularly with Walling injured, were not expected to capture such a clean cut victory.

While the tie 14:13 1-5 for the three mile row was not a record breaker when Navy's last year time of 13:33 3-5 is considered the speed of the westerners, under existing weather and water conditions showed their power. The first mile of the race was run in a light rain, the last two miles in a down pour.

Washington's victory is the first ever taken by the west in the 23 years of the intercollegiate regatta's history.

In the freshmen two mile race, one of the most thrilling seen in Poughkeepsie regatta, Cornell defeated Washington by an eye lash, by one fifth of a second. Syracuse finished third, Pennsylvania fourth, Columbia fifth.

Syracuse won the two mile junior varsity race by a length. Cornell was second, Columbia third, Pennsylvania fourth.

GIBBONS HOLDS WEIGHT FOR WALLOPS

Tommy Gibbons appears heavier than usual in the latest photo from Shelby. Apparently Tom is keeping his weight, while training, so he can put all the power he has behind his wallops when he tackles Champion Dempsey July 4. Whether or not he is sacrificing some speed to hold that power remains to be seen.

SPORT SNAP SHOTS

Two years or so ago Miller Huggins, Yankee manager, decided that Erin Ward, then regarded as the most promising of the younger set among third basemen, would be better as a second sacker than he was at the far turn. And the scoffers scoffed.

There were a good many dark and dreary days waiting for Ward to make good. He botched a good many plays, misjudged some others. He was strange and out of place and could not maneuver after the manner of the elite among second basemen.

And now the Yankees are engaged in what bids to be a tough and bitter battle for the pennant. Ward is still at second base, and the scoffers have ceased to scoff. They want him elected president of the second sacker's club, and they are screaming "Viva Huggins."

And Huggins, not being caught with chaff, smiles his quiet little smile and says to himself, "Wait, Ward hasn't begun to play second base yet. Give him a chance."

Huggins probably is right. Generally he is right. If he says Ward has only begun to play second, there are marvelous things in store for Yankee fans. For with the exception of the only Eddie Collins, the east will tell you, no second sacker in the American league compares with the black-haired Arkansas boy. He does everything that a second baseman should do, and does his work in approved style. He is rapidly improving on the double plays, both as pivot man and starter, and works with Scott in fine style.

This spring when there was talk of Dugan going to second and Ward going to third, the latter asked Huggins about it. "You will play second, Ward, and you'll be a star there," declared Huggins, with conviction. Just ask the fans he is.

If the Athletics could have played the Yanks without the latter having the services of Wally Pipp, the Mackmen might have won Pipp drove in one run in the sixth and hit a homer in the eighth. The Yankee victory gave them a lead of six games.

The Red Sox and Senators fought hard until the ninth when Boston staged a rally, winning 3 to 1.

Also may get a chance to do some twirling.

Y. MAYOR PLAYED AT DRY MEET

WESTERVILLE, O., June 23.—Oral darts interlarded with sarcasm were hurled at Mayor John F. Hyland, New York City, here today by leaders of the anti-saloon league of America.

This joint verbal onslaught was prompted by declarations, penned by the mayor, in letters to William H. Anderson, superintendent of the anti-saloon league of New York, and to Palmer Canfield, prohibition director of New York, that "neither federal agents, nor the anti-saloon league leaders want the Volstead act enforced," that "the prohibition was a reality, anti-saloon leagues would be obliged to go to work, instead of collecting money from honest intended contributors, and living high," and that "the purpose of the anti-saloon league is to keep its officers on the payroll."

Hyland's "talk" sounds more like that of a backwoods justice of the peace than of the mayor of the greatest city in the world," declared Dr. Ernest H. Cherrington, Westerville, general manager of the anti-saloon league's publishing interests and general secretary of the world league against alcoholism. "He is trying desperately to find an alibi for himself. He cannot escape certain responsibility for enforcement of the federal law," continued Dr. Cherrington.

$1,150 was stolen from his house during the raid. He admitted guilt but demanded an investigation of the raid.

Mrs. Miller was fined $1,000 and costs in Southern yesterday on similar charges.

SWINDLERS GET PRIEST FOR $70,000

WASHINGTON, June 23.—To save the Rev. Mr. Jas. M. O'Brien from complete bankruptcy through a stock swindle members of the congregation of St. Peter's Catholic church here today started to raise $40,000 to pay off notes signed by the priest.

The department of justice is now investigating charges that the church was defrauded of about $70,000 and that Father O'Brien stands to lose $150,000 through speculation in the sale of stock. The investments are said to have been made by the priest with a view to improving the church's finance. When he learned that losses could not be avoided, Father O'Brien tried to protect the church by giving it a farm in West Virginia valued at $76,000.

Officers of the church are now engaged in straightening out the financial tangle and to protect the aged priest who is ill at a hospital in Baltimore.

JOHNSON TRIMS RICHARDSON EASILY

WIMBLEDON, Eng., June 23.—William M. Johnston, California tennis wizard, fought his way to a commanding position for the singles championship of the world, when he eliminated Vincent Richards, Yonkers, N. Y., youthful phenomenon, in the fourth round of the Wimbledon tournament today. The score was 6-4, 6-3, 7-5.

Johnson now goes into the round before the semi final and takes a place with the eight survivors in the men's singles championship.

The Californian, by his victory today, maintained his record of defeating Richards every time he has met him.

COLUMBUS, June 23.—Admitting that a question asked reasons for naming Robert E. Lee as the "greatest general of the Civil war" might have been asked in a teachers examination, state director of education Riegel has promised to make a full investigation and report to the G. A. R.

DINNER STORIES

A stranger visiting a little village in a Scotch settlement for the first time was surprised to find two large Presbyterian churches facing each other on the main street. He sought enlightenment of a passing native, recites Judge.

"What was the reason for building two big churches of the same religion in a place this size?" he asked. "Surely, one would accommodate the entire village."

"Yes, you're right," admitted the stranger. "One would be plenty big enough, but there's two different classes of Presbyterians in this place and so they had to have two churches."

"What's the difference in their religious views?"

"Well, so far as I can find out," drawled the native, "one bunch believes that Adam got bad after he ate that apple while the other bunch is convinced he was a darned rascal from the start."

BASEBALL RIVAL OF TENNYSON'S FAMOUS BROOK

"Iron Man" Joe McGlinchy. Tennyson's pet brook, which goes on forever, has little on "Iron Man" Joe McGlinchy. At fifty-two this baseball star is stitching winning baseball for Dubuque. He has pitched three 3-hit games this season and works on an average of three games a week.

MRS. KIRK WINTON, 45, MOTHER OF ELYRIAN, IS DEAD AT AMHERST

AMHERST, June 23.—Mrs. Emma Winton, 45, passed away last night at 10:00 o'clock. Death was due to diabetes. The deceased had been ailing for the past five years, and is survived by her husband, Kirk Winton, and one daughter, Mrs. Katherine O'Brien, also her mother, Mrs. Katherine O'Brien, and two sisters: Mrs. John Krug, also of Amherst, and Mrs. John Herkeler of Birmingham. Mrs. Winton has lived in Amherst practically all her life.

The body was taken to the Baker funeral parlors, where funeral services will be held at two o'clock Friday afternoon.

GOVERNOR SELECTS AN EXECUTIVE SECRETARY

COLUMBUS, June 23.—George H. Thorne, 56, democrat, Logan, Hocking county, former United States assistant, attorney general, today was appointed executive secretary to the governor, to succeed Price Russell, Creston, Wayne county, effective July 1. The position pays $3,000 a year.

It is practically assured that Mr. Russell will be appointed by the governor as a member of the state board of clemency, which supercedes the present state board of pardons and paroles on July 16.

WALSH LEADS GOLFERS

WASHINGTON, June 23.—Richard Walsh, New York, runner up in Toledo last year, lead his team mate, Stewart Whitman, five up at the end of the first 18 holes in public links golf championship finals here today.

PARIS, June 23.—The French senate this afternoon at the request of Premier Poincare voted 307,000,000 francs for the conduct of the Ruhr campaign.

The vote was unanimous. The premier had given assurances that "Germany would be forced to repay with the Ruhr costs getting priority."

TRIAL OF OFFICER

broken down, Whitfield now admits that Griffin died in the car and that he (Whitfield) caused his burial in a lonely wood near Cleveland.

Whitfield asserted to the prosecuting attorney that after Griffin died the body was turned over "to a friend who happened to be passing in a truck." The friend buried the body, according to Whitfield.

Mrs. Agnes Briel identified Whitfield as the man who borrowed a shovel from her May 11, the date of the killing. Whitfield admitted he borrowed a shovel but insisted "his friend" buried the body.

Expect Confession. Photographs of the dead policeman were shown to Whitfield today in an effort to wring from him a complete confession which the prosecuting attorney's office said might be expected. A signed statement was made by Whitfield last night but certain features of it declared to have been an effort to excite public sympathy were not disclosed by the prosecutor "until witnesses to refute the statements may be secured."

When Whitfield is arraigned witnesses will be ready to attack his assertion that he did not bury the body, according to the authorities.

Aversion was displayed by Whitfield when the photographs of Griffin were presented to him. He even exhibited fear.

Before the hearing the prosecutor's office announced it was tightening the lines of evidence about the prisoner and that a clear case would be presented to the jury whether or not Whitfield makes a confession.

Mrs. Briel told the authorities that only one truck which Whitfield could have referred to passed her house near that time when Whitfield borrowed the shovel.

This truck, the prosecutor learned, was driven by Fred Steneman, a farmer, who had been delivering milk in the neighborhood. Steneman will be produced to explode that feature of Whitfield's story. It was learned, Whitfield was quoted as saying that after he had borrowed the shovel he turned to Griffin and said, "Come to the truck driver. His car, he claimed, was not working well causing him to be delayed in getting back to Cleveland."

Says Killing Accidental. Attorneys Arthur H. Day, former candidate for the republican nomination for governor, Elmer Eustace, former assistant prosecuting attorney, and Alfred DeLorenzo will represent Whitfield. They were retained by Mrs. Whitfield, who will make a fight for her husband's life.

It is now believed Whitfield will endeavor to show that Griffin murdered him with a revolver in the machine and that he tried to knock the pistol out of the policeman's hand whereupon he was discharged, killing the officer.

The state will present evidence to show that Griffin was in the proper performance of his duties when he was killed by the other man.

RUM RUNNING

been made that the ships on which seizures have been made were started on their routes from Europe to New York and other ports with extra liquor supplies to test the prohibition law provision applying to foreign ships liquor.

So far as the treasury department has been advised some of the foreign governments have encouraged ships under their registry to transport the surplus liquor into American waters. This government regards the test cases now being made largely as controversies initiated by the foreign ship owners, rather than by the foreign governments whose flags they fly.

To Be More Rigid. Official announcement was made that a "reasonable" time necessarily would have to be allowed before the government could consider more rigid enforcement of the law beyond seizure of liquors.

Officials again emphasized their view that the law vests discretion in the government's enforcement branch and that it is not necessary in the immediate future to adopt an extreme course to handle the situation. It was the confident opinion of high officials of the treasury and state department that the entire situation arising out of beverage liquor aboard foreign vessels soon will subside through the voluntary action by foreign ship companies discontinuing trans portation into American ports of liquor excess of local needs.

Fears No Complications. CHICAGO, June 23.—The next congress will alter the Volstead law so as to permit foreign ships to bring liquor into American waters under seal, in the opinion of Albert D. Lasker, retired chairman of the United States shipping board.

"I do not fear international complications as a result of the ruling against liquor, even under seal, on foreign ships," he said. "But the rule is a blow to American shipping. On the shipping board we learned the fallacy of government ownership of vessels and the sale of such ships is greatly desired. But the liquor ruling will make it very hard to dispose of them."

LONDON, June 23.—Andrew Mellos, secretary of the United States treasury who arrived in England this evening from New York, denied that the American government plans the seizure of foreign ships entering American ports with liquor on board.

PRESIDENT ASSERTS

arrangement proceeded to do everything in its power to better conditions. The policy of public finance which had kept the hand of government in the tills of bankers slinging away from them the resources which business so desperately needed. Business was given a tardy chance to get the money it needed.

A series of reductions in the federal reserve discount rate was inaugurated. Sagacious and some times unpopular gentlemen were set at work pruning down the personnel and expenditures of government. The budget system was inaugurated. Measures were adopted to lighten the taxation load and distribute it more equitably. An international conference for reduction of armaments and some menacing causes of war was started. The federal farm loan board was provided with funds in order that it might resume loans to farmers.

The war finance corporation was given a credit of half a billion dollars and sent out to relieve the agricultural community.

"We summoned the whole community to take itself by its economic bootstraps and lift itself out of the slough of despondency in which it was fast miring down."

A national conference on unemployment was called. The whole business field was surveyed to determine whether more employment could be found and to get man and job together. Appeals were made to every employer to find work for as many people as possible. Municipalities pressed public improvement works. Every employing interest was appealed to to "do it now."

People Help Themselves. "Emergency committees were established all over the country by industries and municipalities to help organize labor and capital, employers and employees united in a common effort which proved to be one of the finest demonstrations of unselfishness that has ever been accomplished on a like scale. Our policy was to encourage the people to help themselves."

"Looking back a scant two years from our present pinnacle of prosperity it is not easy to realize how far we have come. Whatever had been accomplished was made possible by the fact we started with a firm confidence in the capacity of the people to take care of themselves if they were given a fair chance in the aspiration for individualistic freedom in preference to mass control. We thought we knew the American people, and we guessed correctly. The thing the national mobilization voluntarily accomplished was no less an accomplishment than the great co-operation to win the war. It was brought about by a summons to sense and sanity. The method was unique among the procedures adopted by nations in that aftermath crisis. Some of them concluded civilization already was derelict and proceeded to new and strange experiments. Some entered upon the way of communistic organization or disorganization. Some plunged into socialistic projects. Some entered upon inflation and currency debasing, ruining their money systems in order to produce a momentary but dishonest impression of prosperity. Yet others committed themselves to the assumption that the cure for the disorders of peace was more war. One need not recount the misfortunes that have followed upon the collapse of social organization and industrial capacities in some countries nor upon the wreck of financial systems and the destruction of investments in others; nor the industrial paralysis that in some places has followed upon direct contributions from the state treasury."

Harvest of Understanding. "We have little occasion to regret that our own country disappointed those who wished to engage in similar bizarre program. If our procedures have been rather plain and old fashioned they have yet produced results that justify pride and require no apologies."

"Some well meaning but unduly agitated people have feared lest under stress of these past war times our democratic critics might prove inadequate. I never felt more cheerful about that particular matter than right now. Instead of noting sabotage and preaching

ments of revolution, we reaped a harvest of understanding, of established respect among grounds of viewpoints. Such is the interpretation we offer to you of the great American co-operation to conserve the fruits of peace and the fortunes of other countries. It is not presented to you as the accomplishment of a particular administration. Rather, it is placed before you as testimony to the supreme sense and sound genius of a nation. No other people has had the fortune to hear all the achievement. None other looks out today upon so clear horizon and I venture that we stand only in the doorway of the new era."

LOOKING FOR THE SUPER-MAN OR THE SUPER-GOVERNMENT

The Financial Chronicle, the ablest financial journal in the country, which reflects most intelligently the moneyed group, has a strong editorial in a recent number, bemoaning the decline of the self-reliant spirit of the individual. The whole tendency, it asserts, is to throw all problems upon the government, so that the individual may wash his hands of the responsibility.

There is a great deal of force in what the editorial says. But it omits to say that the class which it represents has been as great sinners in the matter as some of the other classes which it arraigns. High finance has not hesitated to use the powers of government to accomplish its ends just as well as the farmer and the manufacturer and the laborer and the social reformer. It is a lesson that every class has learned fairly well in these latter days. Every class is impatient at the slow progress of events, and does not care to wait for the orderly processes of education and understanding. Yet as the editorial wisely states, it would be better all around if the individual tried his own hand before he cried to a super-man or a super-government for help. Legislation which is ahead of public sentiment is always impracticable and unenforceable, and is certain to defeat its own end.

However, we should not overlook the complex character of modern society. The individual in modern society is often powerless against an aggregation of special interests. Henry Ford is a shining example of one man who can do business on an extensive scale without the aid of Wall Street. But where can we locate another? What chance has the working child of the South or women in many of our underpaid industries for the redress of grievances except through the exercise of the police powers of government which are not so frequently invoked in these days. The well-being of all the people is the first concern of government, and while the individual should exercise all his own powers before he calls on the government for help, there are occasions when only the power of government can liberate him from a tyranny that degrades or kills.

The old saying is true that the best government is the one which governs least. But with the increasing inter-actions and inter-relations of men the government is compelled to come in from time to time and regulate things. The simple life of the farm and domestic industry has gone. The industrial civilization put an end to the let-alone policy of government. And the editor of so able a journal as the Financial Chronicle should see around the problem a little more clearly than he does in the editorial cited.

THE PASSING OF THE TWELVE-HOUR DAY

In spite of the report of Judge Gary's committee on the 12-hour day, and the continuance of that inhuman policy by the United Steel Corporation, there are indications that it cannot continue much longer. Public sentiment is against it. Practically the entire press of the country—the daily press as well as the religious, received Judge Gary's decision unfavorably. More and more he is finding himself alone in the advocacy of the policy.

The American Association for Labor Legislation now reports that the Youngstown Sheet and Tube Company and the Republic Iron and Steel Company have abolished the 12-hour shift in the open hearth departments of their plants. This has been done at the request of the men themselves according to the statement issued. They are willing to accept less pay than under the old system. The company reports no shortage of men, and that the results are eminently satisfactory from the standpoint of production. Surely an old system dies hard, but die it will when it runs contrary to the ethical and the humanitarian sentiment of a fairly well united public opinion.

KOMICAL TELEGRAMS

By JIM ARMITAGE, Himself

Just when you get settled down to a summer's work you get a post card from Alex Altfield telling how they're biting out in Colorado. But you stay here and work—so it don't mean anything.

Then "Slim" Fitch remembers you. "Catching 'em in North Carolina," he tells you. They're ought to be a law against giving out that kind of information.

You live through that. Then the next one is from John Schmauch. "Look at the big muscalonge I landed." He don't show any judgment at all.

See where the Exchange Club elected Tim Terrell president. Remember "Woolsey, the butcher boy?" He ain't got much on Tim.

Guess things are a little dull around the Chronicle-Telegram office—Hudnutt taking a vacation. He'll be looking for the bird who coined that wise crack about "Two can live as cheap as one."

Still it could have been worse—he could have been married at a tender age.

They ought to offer a reward, dead or alive for the brother who wrote "Yes, we have no bananas."

Didn't Jake Shaffer look cute at the picnic in his nice new suit? He took second prize in the beauty contest.

Always had a good opinion of Joe Snyder 'till I saw him come in at Jack's garage with a vanity case in his hand—he used the old alibi, "It belongs to my wife."

A lot of "soft drink parlors" sell "hard" likker.

Dempsey insists that Montana promoters give him $300,000 to fight. Over in Ireland his ancestors used to fight for much less. All they asked was—the opportunity.

Montana claims "They'll give him the other $100,000 after the fight is over—guarantee that's 'Bull' Montana."

Whitfield looks healthy enough—but he'd be a poor life insurance risk.

Speaker from Oberlin told at the

TIMELY VIEWS ON WORLD TOPICS

"FRENCH POLICY MAY BE BEGINNING OF NEW NAPOLEONIC ERA."

The present French policy, as prosecuted now may be the beginning of a new Napoleonic era, in the opinion of Pierrepoint Noyes, American representative on the Rhineland high commission.

"Whom the gods would destroy they first make mad. That sums up my views of French policy," says Noyes. "French policy is driving toward a climax as dangerous for the world as the intrigues of July, 1914. Here in America we seem as blind to the real meaning of these events as we were then. The newspapers can wake up the nation. I think the most remarkable aspect of the present crisis is the patience of Britain under the most humiliating treatment of any nation except Germany has endured within my memory. One can hardly believe that possession for a short time of the most powerful army in the world could have created such a megalomania in France that her responsible government has decided to classify Britain with Germany as a potentially beaten foe. Yet it looks that way."

POEMS THAT LIVE

THE POPLAR FIELD
The poplars are fell'd, farewell to the shade
And the whispering sound of the cool colonnade.
The winds play no longer and sing in the leaves,
Nor Ouse on his bosom their image receives.

Twelve years have elapsed since I first took a view
Of my favorite field, and the bank where they grew;
And now in the grass behold they are laid,
And the tree is my seat that once lent me a shade.

The blackbird has fled to another retreat
Where the hazels afford him a screen from the heat;
And the scene where his melody charmed me before Resounds with his sweet flowing ditty no more.

My fugitive years are all hastening away,
And I must ere long lie as lowly as they.
With a turf on my breast and a stone at my head,
Ere another such grove shall rise in its stead.

'Tis a sight to engage me, if anything can,
To muse on the perishing pleasures of man;
Short-lived as we are, our enjoyment
Has a still shade date; and die sooner than we.

—William Cowper.

VACATION DEMOCRACY

By SPENCER W. REEDER

"Who was that?" a woman's voice questioned in startled tones.

We were sitting on the deck of a passenger liner plowing its way through the blue waters of Lake Michigan on a starless night last summer. A man had suddenly passed our party in the darkness. A tramp of heavy shoes, a reek of garbage and grease, a glimpse of a white apron, not too clean, and he was gone.

"Only one of the kitchen scullions," the voice of a man replied to the woman's query. "The filthy pig had no right on deck."
The man was correct in thinking that the cook was breaking the rules of the ship by going on deck, but the blood rushed to my head at the contemptuous and undemocratic nature of his reply. Then and there I resolved to find out what these "pigs" these "kitchen scullions" are like and what they do to merit or not to merit such epithets. Since such information, as you will readily agree, could not be gotten from a stateroom point of view, I have just worked my passage part way home from college on a ship, not in a cool, uniformed position, but in the capacity, if you please, of a "kitchen scullion."

Kitchen a Furnace.

The kitchen of that boat was hotter, many times hotter, than the city from which the passengers out on deck had fled to cool off. A monster range poured forth waves of warmth which spread until they joined those from two torrid baking ovens and even the sea of dish-water, where the dirty dishes and greasy pots that had contained the passengers' food were cleaned, gave off a dense steam that made the place not only hot but also humid.

When I had scraped the pots, mopped up the blige water in one of the refrigerators, carried out the garbage, and peeled a peck of potatoes, the chief told me to sweep the kitchen floor and go to bed. On the way to bed I fell in with two fellows about my own age, who, thinking I was to be a permanent member of the crew, hastened to inform me about the traditions of the ship.

"You don't want tuh git fresh with the crew of this ship," said the older of the two. "A nigger tried it last year an' we threw him into the sea. Let's hear his bones a-crushin' yit. Every time I think about it I have to bust out laughin'."

Was Prime Fighter.
"Yep, this sure is a hard crew. We had a fight with the longshoremen not long ago, an', when the fight was over, longshoremen with cracked hands was layin' all over everything. I laid out more'n one meself."

"A good boxer?" he continued. "Well, I'll say so. I'm only 19 but I've already retired from the ring. I was in 143 ring battles, was knocked out in 38, and won all the rest by a knockout."

At this point I proposed a little sparring match with everything permissible except hitting in the face. He agreed and seemed surprised when I pounded him all over the freight deck.

I guess you knowed I was just bluffin', he said with a sheepish smile as we shook hands and started toward the pile of sacked rock salt on which we slept that night. The next morning I made toast for the chef. The night before that stove had seemed hot, but now, as I burnt the toast and burnt my fingers while the sweat poured over my nose as the water pours over the cliff at Niagara, the great black range, glowing red here and there, assumed the proportions of a genti torturing me with fiendish delight. "That's a hot stove, chef," I remarked, as the water from the side-wheel splashing against the closed porthole accentuated the heat by contrast with its green coolness. "Yes," the chef replied, a flicker of passion flaring up in his faded blue eyes, "that fire and others like it have made me an old man at 35."

Need Lincoln Democracy.
And it had. For the matted hair was greasy and the face beneath it was haggard and tired.

"These men may talk a language that could not pass in a drawing room," said I to myself, "they may wear clothes that are not as spick and span as those of my friends, but if I ever hear one, who eats the food they leave in this furnace to cook, call them 'pigs' and 'scullions' again, I fear I shall do something more than get angry."

There are some places in this country, and perhaps Elyria may be one of them, which need, more than anything else, a revival of the democracy of Abraham Lincoln if the republic which he preserved shall long endure.

A SWARM OF BEES SETTLED on Broad street, and made it decidedly unpleasant for pedestrians until Dr. Peckham with the aid of a tin pan and a soap box succeeded in driving them.

MAJOR JOHN BULLOCK, VETERAN of the civil war, died quite suddenly in the fifty-fifth years of his age.

ENGINEER BERT HODGMAN, Elyria, piloted the engine from Toledo to Cleveland a distance of 108 miles that hauled the train containing William H. Vanderbilt and party. The trip was made in two hours and four minutes, considered a record for those days. Hodgman and his fireman were each given a cash present for the performance.

WHO'S WHO IN THE DAY'S NEWS

PROF. ALEXANDER MEIKLEJOHN.

Alexander Meiklejohn, who resigned recently as President of Amherst college at the request of the college trustees, has long been an outstanding figure and often a storm-center in the educational world.

Always he has preached the doctrine that what the world needs most is minds that can think clearly, and he has staunchly advocated, in a day of fads and eclectics, the old-fashioned system of "required" studies as being the curriculum tending best to produce such minds. Since the war, still maintaining his idea and strengthened in it by the catastrophe of 1914, he has declared, sometimes bitterly, that civilization cannot last with such soft thinking as the world has done in the past, and that the salvation of the human race depends upon education that really educates and that is not restricted to a favored few.

Dr. Meiklejohn became the head of Amherst in May, 1912 after serving for eleven years as Dean of Brown University. At the time of his inauguration he was described as "the youngest college head, with the oldest ideas, in the country." At Brown he was called "the dean of philosophic view."

He loved teaching better than administering, and stipulated that although president of the college he should be allowed to conduct at least one class.

Dr. Meiklejohn was born in Rochdale, Eng., Feb. 3, 1872. He came to America when eight years of age. He obtained an A. B. degree at Brown University in 1893. Four years later he joined the faculty of Brown as instructor of philosophy. He became dean of that institution in 1901.

BEET SUGAR TO REDUCE PRICE

American Product Goes Into Dis-tributors' Hands Not to Exchange, Claim.

EFPIANCE, O., June 29.—"Be-cause domestic sugar is in no way lived in the present government to end gambling in prices we another convincing argument the best way to lower the price o raise more beets in this country," said Charles H. MICHELIN Tubes are ring- shaped and fit the ring- shaped tire without being strained. Hence they last.

Other tubes are made straight, and must be stretched and wrinkled to go into the round tire. Constant strains wear out straight tubes quickly.

Michelin Tubes cost no more to buy and less to use than others.

ABDUCTED ON EVE OF WEDDING

WEDDING, June 29.—With her wedding date set for Monday, Mary, 17, of this city was kidnapped last night by a former sweetheart and carried away in an automobile, the police said this morning.

The abduction took place about 10 o'clock. Vincent Iorio, the bride's father, was sitting at the table when he heard a rap on the door. When he opened the door, three men faced him.

"Where's your daughter whose wedding is to be on Monday?" Iorio was asked.

Answering the question Iorio tried to shut the door when one of the intruders thrust a gun into his face. The other two ran into the house, seized the daughter and carried her away in an automobile.

Officers investigating believe the machine was driven towards Cleveland. Miss Iorio was to be married to Joe Guala next week.

GRAND—Alice Brady's latest picture, "The Snow Bride." This is a story of Canada without a mounted policeman in it. It deals with fur trading in the north and the love of a fur buyer's daughter for a young and intrepid sheriff. One of the thrills is a mountain snow slide, actually photographed which buries most of the little Canadian village where the picture is taken. There is an excellent cast all through.

Dreamland—"The Stranger of the Hills," a real Western drama, as full of excitement as can be crowded into it. In addition "The Haunted Valley" and a good comedy.

COLONIAL—A new picture that will please. There is a love story interwoven in it, with brilliant costumes, and heart interest incidents that make the picture a very attractive one. There is also a good comedy and a series of news of the week pictures.

SAN DIEGO, Cal., June 29.—Captain Lowell M. Smith and Lieutenant John B. Richter narrowly escaped death when in a forced landing their big De Havilland "air marathon" plane turned completely over at Rockwell Field. The machine was badly damaged, but the two intrepid aviators who had been in the air for almost 24 hours crawled out virtually uninjured.

For Vacation Discomforts

The unaccustomed exercise of vacation-time is apt to make the muscles sore, stiff and painful. Other sports are sunburn, insect bites and poison oak or poison ivy. Vicks can be applied to prevent these discomforts and is also a soothing relief. It helps, too, in case of summer colds, hay fever or headache.

CITY MANAGER FORM OF GOVERNMENT PLAN WELL RECEIVED HERE

OBERLIN, June 29.—About fifty people were present at the meeting in Sturges Hall Tuesday evening, at which the city manager type of government was discussed. The meeting was held under the auspices of the League of Women Voters. The plan, explained by Professor Geiser, was favorably received by those present, practically all of whom signed the petition, asking for a referendum.

The idea has been growing in Oberlin for some time that the city manager plan of government might be very practicable for the town.

First M. E. Church Societies Give $300.00 to Old Ladies' Home

The General Ladies' Aid society of the First Methodist church was organized yesterday afternoon by Mrs. E. W. Kirby at the home of Mrs. E. W. Kirby. Many women were present at the business meeting presided over by Mrs. M. M. Williams, the president, and listened to the splendid report of the year's work as reported by the leaders of the church circles. They learned that each circle had not only raised more than its apportionment but had doubled the amount secured in the year.

A musical program followed in charge of Mrs. C. D. Beazell, consisting of vocal solos by Miss Louise Biggs, vocal duets by Miss Merton and Mrs. C. D. Beazell, piano duet by Mrs. C. D. Beazell and Miss Grace VanDorsten, and two solos by Miss Grace VanDorsten and Miss Cora Bassett. Light refreshments were served and a social hour completed the pleasant afternoon.

DINNER STORIES

A landlord in a certain town found it no easy matter to collect his rent with unfailing regularity, recites London Ideas.

One woman was particularly trying in this respect, and he thought himself lucky if he only received from her part of the rent due.

One morning when he called at her house she offered him a half dollar.

"Is that all you've got for me?" he asked with a scowl. "You're so much in arrears."

"Go on, now, and be satisfied," was the reply. "You wouldn't have that if my old man hadn't sold the back door."

A farmer in the middle west conceived the idea that onions would be profitable to raise and on the strength of it he produced a big crop for the east side New York market, says the Los Angeles Examiner.

When asked how much money he made he shrugged his shoulders and remarked disgustedly:

"De ducks got 'em." That sounded interesting and he was asked to explain.

"Well, it was like dis. I shipped 'em to de commission man and he send me a paper which said how much he got for 'em; den he deducks his commission, he deduck freight, he deduck spoilage, he deduck cartage, he deduck some o'der things, an' den I get $1.72. You say vot you do with de onions—I say de ducks got 'em."

REVOLUTIONIZING AUTO BUSINESS; NEW WHEELS ERA

ALBANY, N. Y., June 29.—Reger W. Babson was today asked what is the greatest factor with which the banker, manufacturer, and merchant must reckon during the next 20 years. He at once answered,
"automobiles." His complete statement is as follows:

"We all marvel at the great growth of the automobile industry.
The capital invested, the men employed, and the auxiliary lines which have developed on account of automobiles. Some of us try to
men would be doing today if it were not for automobiles—how many more homes there would be —how much more railroad mileage etc. Very few, however, have realized that automobiles are entirely changing the fundamental character of our children and this in turn may revolutionize many industries.
When we were children a ten mile drive was a considerable trip.
A hundred and fifty miles was a great journey for which we would prepare for weeks. Many of us never traveled that far until we were grown up. Today, however, the situation is very different.
Young children will go a hundred and fifty miles for a Sunday drive.
Our young people use automobiles to go to the store, and to go to church. It has become a necessity.
We are raising a generation which will actually work and play on wheels.

"This cannot help but greatly develop certain industries and harm others. At present the automobile is greatly helping the building industry because of the millions of people moving from the cities to the suburbs and country. After, however, this exodus has been completed, the building industry will fall flat. Why?—because instead of a young married couple now saving for a little home—they save for a car—or rather they buy a car on credit. Less money will be spent upon clothing than otherwise would be and a different kind of clothing will be in demand. New diseases will develop and a change in diet will be necessary. A generation on wheels must eat much more fruit and fresh vegetables than a generation which walks.

"Every business man should study this problem and ask himself how his business will be affected when a generation lives which almost never walks. The road builders will greatly benefit; but the shoe dealers must suffer. With a given population, less is produced by a generation on wheels than by a former generation which did not know the automobiles. If less is produced, there will be less to divide. This means that many people must go without other things if they insist on having automobiles, and my guess is that they will so insist.

"I believe in the permanence of the automobile industry—altho, of course, many small manufacturers will be crowded out and 1924 may see an over-production of cars. The industry as a whole, however, is stable and is here to stay. The difficulty is coming when the man who now buys on credit, and assesses his employer to pay the bill can no longer do this. Most industries will stand such an assessment once; but very few industries can stand such an assessment continually. The laborer whom you are now paying $25 a week can buy his first car and can assess you to pay for it by demanding $10 per week instead of $25. But can he assess you for his second or third car;

and can his children do the same thing? Frankly, I do not know.
Only the future can tell.

"The automobile industry is largely responsible for the condition of business today. The fact that the Babsonchart stands at 1% above normal compared with 17% below a year ago is due largely to the automobile industry. When one considers that during the first six months of 1923 most states will show as many new registrations as during all of 1922—it is remarkable that business has not boomed more. The only answer is that people have bought automobiles instead of buying something else—that is, the sales of other things have fallen off correspondingly.
The law of Action and Reaction is absolute. Now what will be the reaction of a new generation which knows not the joy of walking?"

MAKING A HOME OF AN APARTMENT

A Problem Confronting Many City Dwellers.

THE LIMITATIONS OF SIZE

careful Judgment in Furnishing Will Make Attractive and Livable Dwelling Place Though Space May Be Limited.

Although to own one's home is the ideal of every one, we yet have with us the cities ever mean suggestion of population and when in a city of ground must form the same site for scores of families, the apartment building is the only solution. They can't be ignored by furniture designers, for a great proportion of our city residents live in them, and as long as there are city new-comers, new furniture will be required to put into "three rooms and bath" home. Thus the range of apartment furniture has become much greater within the last few years.

The chief objection to an apartment as a home is that it rarely has a homelike atmosphere. The home-maker has made the mistake of trying to furnish the apartment like a house, and it can't be done, successfully. Two girls of totally different types cannot wear clothes of similar design and each look her best, yet each can dress to suit her particular type and be a beauty in her own fashion. This applies to houses and apartments.

Rugs, furniture and draperies must be assembled with a thought of their harmonious relation and the space they will occupy. Oftentimes massive furniture is crowded into cramped quarters until it gives the impression of having been bought for a more pretentious establishment, and later brought to "reduced circumstances."

Subdued Tones for Walls.

The first consideration must be the walls. Whether painted, papered or plastered, they should be kept subdued in tone. Large conspicuous patterns in the paper, or warm colors, red, yellow or orange, have a tendency to bring the walls close, while cool grays and tans are receding colors, which give an impression of greater space. A small apartment with French doors or wide doorways may have the walls in the different rooms treated alike, which gives a further impression of space, or two of the rooms may give a harmonious contrast, with the bedroom papered with a narrow vertical stripe.

When selecting the furnishings for the apartment, the home-maker should begin with the living room. If this room properly reflects the home atmosphere, the rest of the apartment can take care of itself. It is not necessary that the furniture be of a specific style or period, or even matched, but the chairs should all be comfortable, and each piece in the room in key with the others and with the walls, rugs and hangings.

Room Influences Color Scheme.

The first consideration in choosing the color scheme should be to determine whether the room is "light" or "dark." Nine chances to one are that it is dark. Thus forewarned with the knowledge that she must overcome the limitations of darkness and limited space, the home-maker has a good foundation to work from. The furniture should not be too heavy and cumbersome. Great overstuffed pieces that look well and are delightfully comfortable in the spacious country house, are taboo in the city apartment. But there are innumerable upholstered sofas of davenport, rocker and easy chair, whose slender carved or tapered legs, cane inserts and other features, give them an air of being in their proper surroundings. A good reading table is a necessity, which may be larger or smaller, according to the presence or absence of a piano. A couple of extra chairs, possibly of the comfortable Windsor type, which blends happily with most upholstered furniture, are sufficient.

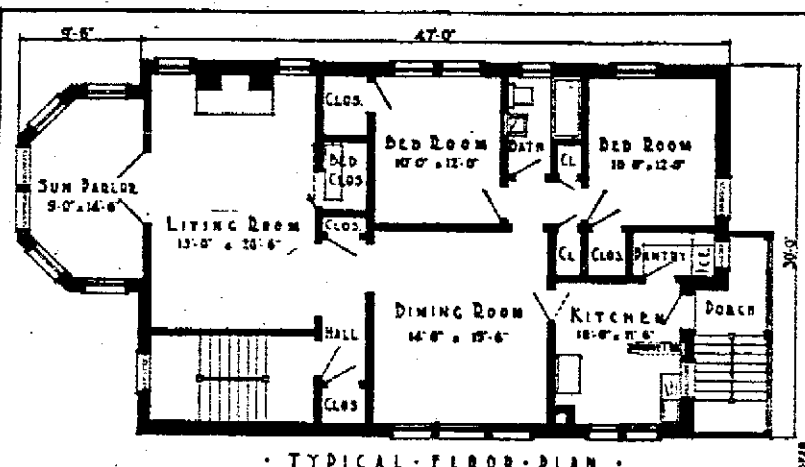

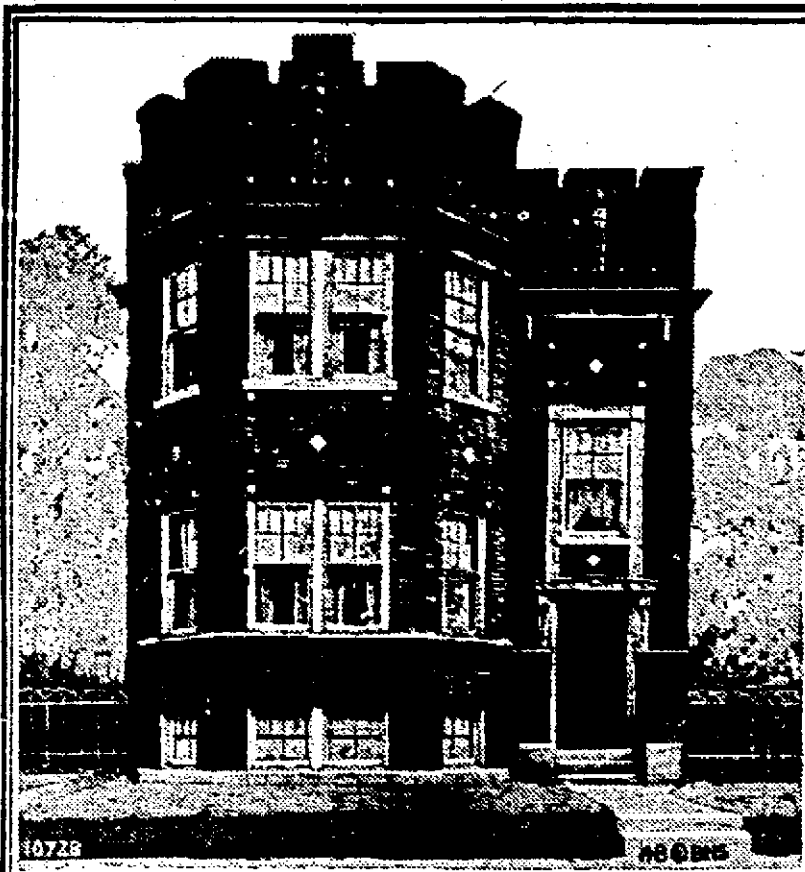

The rug should not be too dark. It would have a tendency to lower the scheme of the entire room, but should be of a neutral shade darker than the walls. The windows should have cream or white glass curtains, preferably of net, and overdraperies of light-colored chintz which carries out the color scheme, or silk in a plain color or narrow stripe, according to the taste of the owner, for the overdrapes. If there is no fireplace, its glow may be simulated by shades of warm colors, red, orange and yellow, for the lamps. Reading lamps which stand on their own base are preferable to table lamps, for the limited lamp space may be utilized by books and a vase of flowers.

The Dining Room.

The dining room, which usually opens off the living room with French doors, may repeat the color scheme of the living room, and if harmonious color scheme is used, the dining table, with huge bulbous legs, has no place in the small apartment dining room. But there are many small matched suites to choose from, and the home-maker can find a suitable type, for the pattern range from mahogany gate-leg tables to the painted set in which the table, serving table and chairs collect may be stored beneath the table in a space some 18 inches wide.

The bedroom should likewise be decorated with furniture which does not give the impression of over-crowding. Day beds are much

Home for Two Families

TYPICAL FLOOR PLAN

Many prospective home builders desire more than a home for themselves; they also want to make an investment that will bring them a steady, even though it is a small income. That is why the two-flat building has been and is, a most popular type of building, especially in the larger cities. The same foundation walls and the same roof support and cover two homes, the only added cost being the extra walls and the interior finish of the second apartment. Those who have made a study of home building will realize that an apartment building is in reality two or more bungalows, one placed on top of the other, usually with identical floor plans. The owner lives in one of the apartments and rents the other; the same heating plant provides for both.

A typical building of this character is shown in the illustration, while with the exterior view is a typical floor plan. This building is of brick construction, with the exterior walls covered with a face brick veneer. It is set on a concrete foundation and has a full basement for the accommodation of the heating plant and the laundry needs to brighten the apartment bedroom, which is unusually lucky if it has more than one window, but one must take care to have it bear small patterns, rather than huge conventionalized figures of birds, beasts and flowers. Window drapes, dresser top and chair cushions will be a sufficient amount of chintz to brighten the room, even though the furniture is dark.

To demonstrate the hominess and cheeriness with which an apartment may be decorated and furnished, the Queensborough corporation of New York recently employed an experienced interior decorator to furnish an exhibition apartment with furniture and materials suited to the style and size of the apartment and the probable means of occupant. The result was so satisfactory that the decorator has been retained to consult with the new tenants in selecting the scheme of furnishings to suit individual tastes.

TABLE SHOULD BE MAIN FEATURE OF DINING ROOM

Other Furnishings Planned to Bring Spirit of Good Cheer and Contentment.

A dining room is supposed to be a place where people eat. Not much chance there for argument, yet how often that idea seems to get mislaid in the minds of home makers and decorators. Now if a room is to be used for eating, the important feature of that room should be the table upon which the eatables are placed and around which the family gathers to dispose of them. It should be the high light of the room-picture with everything else in half-tone. Of course, one can imagine circumstances such as food shortage or poor cooking which might make it desirable to divert our minds into other channels, as did Bill Nye, who in time of financial stress, provided "mush and cat" for the family, leading them in singing while they partook of cornmeal mush.

Our thoughts at meal time should be pleasant ones, and everything about the room suggestive of happiness and cheer. The decorations, pictures, in fact, the entire room should be planned with the idea of contributing to the spirit of good cheer and contentment. We have all gone into dining rooms expecting to enjoy a good meal and found the surroundings so

FINANCING HOME BUYING NO LONGER HAS TERRORS

Furnishing of Funds for Home Building Now Organized Business Founded on Good Faith.

"Whenever I go into a bank I get rattled," Stephen Leacock confesses in beginning one of his inimitable sketches. The average man who has overcome his misgivings at the cages and bars of a bank can sympathize with him, for who among us has not turned cold at the thought of financing the building of a home?

And yet why should he? Is it the leech-like mortgage of the old melodrama—the rapacity of the money lenders as depicted in "The Merchant of Venice," or the thought of dispossession on a bitter winter night that has unjustly prejudiced many of the uninitiated to this particular phase of modern-day business credit?

Fortunately for the would-be home builder, within the past decade there has come a systematizing of loans and credit with respect to the home-builder and his problems that has taken away much of the red tape and difficulties. There is no longer a reason—save an uncommendable timidity—that need prevent a man with a position, who is paying rent, from building his own home.

It is desirable, before any financial negotiations are entered into, to ascertain as nearly as possible, just what your proposed home is to cost. Plans and specifications, including such details as the furnace, electric light fixtures, and interior finish, should be submitted to various contractors for estimates. With these figures you are prepared to talk business.

Unless your home is to be built under the contract system under the direction of a home-building company, it is always advisable to have your loan paid for. This is a tangible evidence of good faith on your part that cannot fail making a good impression.

In addition to having the lot, a sum of money between 10 and 20 per cent of the total value of the house you propose to build is almost a necessity.

If you are paying from 20 to 25 per cent of your income for rent, you have that as the nucleus to make your regular payments, month by month. In addition to this, such sums as you would naturally save during the year, can be added to the payments, except the amount required to pay the interest on the deferred payments, and such necessary items as fuel, light, taxes, insurance and upkeep.

It is advisable that your home cost no more than the total sums you are prepared to pay over a period of ten or fifteen years. Even though that is only $40 per month—for instance—over a period of ten years it will amount to $4,800. Briefly, there are three methods of home financing. One is paying on contract, another is borrowing on first and second mortgages, and the third is by membership in a building and loan association.

If you have a clear title to the lot, and are able to make a cash payment of from 10 to 20 per cent of the house value, there are a number of home building companies that will take over your lot and build the house under the contract system. The company will hold the title to the house until the monthly payments, usually one per cent of the total, amount to the total value.

Under this plan, however, you must look at your contract with the closest scrutiny. Also, consider the financial and business reputation of the company you are dealing with, and choose none but the best. With the contract system you have the advantage of dealing with one person throughout the entire transaction, but it has more stringent provisions in that dispossession may take place in 60 days, whereas in the case of a mortgage you are safeguarded for a much longer time.

Assuming that your lot is paid for, and you have the means to make an initial payment, then it will not be difficult to place a first mortgage of 50 to 60 per cent of the total house and lot value. The remainder will be taken care of by a second mortgage.

For instance, if your house is to cost $6,500, you will be able to get a first mortgage of at least $3,500. With a first payment of $1,500, then the second mortgage need only be arranged for $1,500. The same procedure would be in order, whether the cost of the house was more or less.

A state bank will nearly always take a first-class mortgage, but usually the second mortgage must be offered to other institutions or individuals. Contractors are often willing to take the second mortgage in part payment of their services.

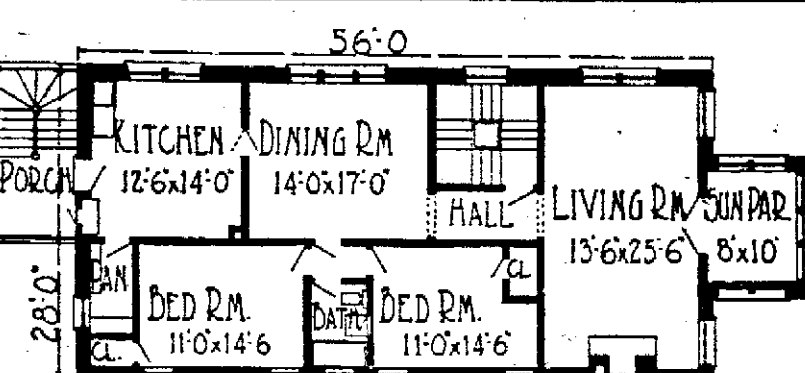

Membership in a building and loan association is one of the most practicable and satisfactory ways in which to arrange for financing a home. There are many such associations, entirely reputable. You become a member by subscribing for stock, payable in weekly or monthly installments of 25 cents or more per share. The number of shares you contract for depends, of course, upon how large a loan you desire.

When your payments are equal to from 20 to 25 per cent of the amount you need to build your home, you will obtain the loan by assigning your stock to the association, in addition to giving a first mortgage on both the house and lot to the association. The mortgage is only for the amount between the total cost and the money you have paid in.

After this has been arranged, all you need do is to keep on paying into the association the regular monthly installments, plus the interest on the mortgage. This stock continues to pay dividends, and when the dividends and the earnings equal the par value of the stock, you transfer the shares to the association, and in turn you receive title to the property.

A Good Investment

TYPICAL FLOOR PLAN

With its three floors, each arranged to give the greatest possible amount of floor space, and designed to make the most of the space limitations of a narrow lot, this three-apartment building appeals as much for its investment capabilities as for its up-to-date, pleasing appearance. The ornamental hip roof of green tile combines to make its appearance from the street more imposing.

The entrance is through the high English basement, which would be an inviting hallway, finished either in marble or wood or composition paneling. The apartments are entered from the hall landings, the door opening into a vestibule, connecting in turn with the living room and dining room.

Worthy of note is the living room, arranged, according to the latest ideas in apartment construction, to occupy the full width of the apartment on each floor. The plan calls for light on two sides of the living room, but this could be increased to three sides with windows that flanked the fireplace at one end.

The sun parlor is divided from the living room by double doors and a wall, which construction could be omitted at the owner's discretion, making one large room. The dining room has triple-window lighting and well-balanced wall space that shows the buffet and other furnishings to the best advantage. It opens directly into the kitchen, the ample dimensions of which are inviting in these days of almost top-compartment kitchenettes. A nice feature is the outside sliding door for the refrigerator. The pantry with its windows means considerable saving in ice expense in cool weather.

There are two bedrooms, which brings the number of rooms in all to five, exclusive of sun parlor. Both bedrooms consist of lot bedrooms and have excellent lighting and closet space. This type of apartment suggests itself as an investment, the owner to occupy one floor and the remaining two floors let to the desired kind of tenants.

THE FORGOTTEN LETTER

Did you ever pass a furniture store display window, glance at the piece, see a small writing desk just give it merely glancing notice, then continue on your journey?

It did not occur to you that the escutcheon, or small writing desk, or desk secretary you saw, stood there as a monument to a nation's forgetfulness. But it did.

Some of the world's greatest literature consists of letters. Who has not read and re-read, with tear-dimmed eyes, Lincoln's letter to the mother whose son was slain in battle?

Tucked away in mother's bureau drawer is a faded packet of letters that brings a gleam to her eyes and sweet wistfulness to her face.

How tragic, the forgotten bundle of letters stained with the tears of the maiden whose lover died overseas.

Letters—that say so much, or so little. How subtle, the letter that says one thing and means another. How aggravating, the letter that leaves you uncertain. How devastating, the forgotten letter reproduced to confound you.

It is to be regretted that in these days of pell-mell, progress you may call it, we are losing the courtliness, the gallantry, the fine politeness of the letter. Or are we? Perhaps you still write letters and receive them. If you do, encourage others because the day of friendly letter writing is waning, it is becoming a lost art.

HOME OWNING IS BEST INVESTMENT

Safest Security and Pays Largest Returns on Money.

AN INCENTIVE TO SAVING

Interesting Figures Show Large Saving Made by Home Owners as Compared With Cost of Renting Same Home.

Acres of literature have been offered, in lectures, books and papers without number, have been written dealing with the joys of home ownership, the health value, unrestricted freedom, the value of permanent friendships, good citizenship and community spirit, available only to home owners. The average home seeker readily accepts the argument that these advantages for himself and loved ones are in fact worth real money and are from every angle of the utmost value and importance, but there still remains a large army of individuals who must be sold on the proposition that, independent of all these things, the purchase of a home must justify itself on the basis of a real saving in "cold cash." That is, he must be shown that it is cheaper in dollars and cents to buy than to rent.

Compare Owning and Renting.

The intending home buyer should study carefully the following table of figures, which distinctly and clearly sets forth the financial advantage to the purchaser of a two flat building, on a fifteen-year time payment basis. Rentals figured are conservatively estimated and averaged over a long period of years.

Total cost 23,796.70

Income for 15 years pays for building and creates a surplus of $2,303.30

In the meantime the tenant, at $50 per month, has frittered away (in principal and interest) $13,060.00 and doesn't own a shingle, is still "in harness," subject to landlord's dictation, is 15 years older, earning power waning, etc.

The following is an interesting calculation showing the deplorable predicament of a tenant as compared with purchaser of a modest cottage selling for $5,000.00 on an eighteen-year payment plan.

"A" Pays $37.50 per month rent for 18 years.
18 years' rent at $37.50 per month $8,100.00
Interest at 6% (average 9 years) 4,374.00

Cost of 18 years' rent .. $12,474.00
And he doesn't own a shingle! He is 18 years older, with earning power waning, and still "in harness," paying rent.

See what "B" has accomplished in the same time with $2,074 less money.

"B" Buys cottage $5,000.00 (paying paid). Pays $500 cash, balance payable with all interest in 18 years.
Cost of cottage $ 5,000.00
Less cash payment 500.00

Interest for 18 years at 6% $4,500.00
Add cash payment 500.00
Interest on cash payment 540.00

"B" has home absolutely paid for (with all interest) in 18 years for total cost of $10,400.00, $2,074.00 less than rent has cost "A."

"B's" notes, paid monthly, represent ever-increasing equity, while "A's" accumulated rent receipt are worthless.

"B" and his family have all this time been in the full enjoyment of home, while "A" has been hauling his family and furniture from "pillar to post" to avoid "landlordism."

In treating with a modest home no taxes are figured, because the average tenant must admit that he pays in moving expenses, at the day's cost, over a period of eight or ten years, and figuring broken furniture, lost time, extra help, etc., an amount fully equal to the tax consideration.

Use Careful Judgment.

It should be understood that in buying either a vacant lot or a home, the purchaser is called upon to use reasonable judgment, to compare the offerings of various sub-dividers and builders, consider the trend of population growth, present transportation and probable future improvements of all kinds. Assuming ordinary care in these matters, the intending home buyer may easily take for granted the fairness of this statement: The material and enhancement in the value of the property purchased will far exceed any possible depreciation either in the value of the land and improvements or in the income therefrom.

Three Beautiful Apartment Interiors

ugly and depressing that we lost interest and appetite. Then again we have gone into some bright, cheerful room with everything fresh and attractive, the linen snowy, the silver and glassware glistening and the whole room inviting; and with perhaps the simplest of food have had the enjoyment of epicures.

Not Place for Skeletons.

We occupy the dining room but a short time and our minds are at ease, as we can enjoy livelier surroundings there than in the living room or library where we wish to concentrate on serious reading and conversation. For that very reason we don't want to look at portraits of dead rabbits and birds when we eat; they make us feel like cannibals when the meat course is served. Neither do we enjoy stuffed corpses of fish or game stuck around on the wall. The ancients had a skeleton at the feast; we want glowing, vigorous life to inspire us.

While it is quite proper to display a few of our choicest pieces of porcelain or silver, it is not well to have all the family tableware on exhibition. Plates, tea cups and serving knives are appropriate decorations for a table top, but some fringes of cups hanging from a shelf and other eating utensils strung along an open plate rail are too suggestive of dust and fly specks to be appetizing. Even heaps of china in a glass case seem out of place in the dining room—they belong in the pantry. A few choice specimens displayed for their beauty are desirable, but why stack them up? We would not treat pictures that way; why mistreat beautiful china and glass?

A dining room, like anything else, is most satisfactory when it is best suited to its use, no whatever in it helps to make dining enjoyable is worth while, but anything that interferes with it should be disposed of. The room should be comfortable, usable and attractive, and so filled with cheer as to make of each meal not a mere hunger stopper but a happy family gathering.

PRESIDENTIAL QUESTION MARKS

President Harding's renomination by the U. S. P. considered certain since another action would be U. S. P. repudiation of the Harding administration.

Senator Robert M. La Follette, Wisconsin progressive and radical Republican, who has been a potential third party leader for years, may head new ticket this year.

Henry Ford, whose denials of political ambitions are getting weaker day by day, may get the Democratic nomination or he may head independent ticket if he decides to run in 1924.

STORE NEWS

FRIDAY, JUNE 29, 1923

ELYRIA, O.

JULY
SALE

Twice a year, during January and July, we make a general clearance sale throughout our entire store. This is done to clean up odd and broken lots and to reduce surplus stock.

Our July Clearance
Sale Opens Monday,
July 2nd.

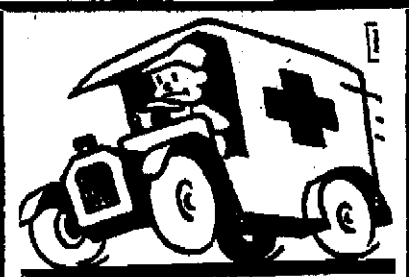

At which time there will be a general, substantial reduction in the price of practically every item in the entire store.

Sheets, pillow-cases, tickings, dress goods, gingham, percales, hosiery, underwear and everything in ladies' and children's ready-made goods will be offered during this sale at an honest, genuine reduction.

We urge you to come to our store and get our prices on anything you may need in the dry goods line before purchasing anywhere else.

We know that this great sale is a real opportunity for you to save money and are confident, if you will compare our prices and qualities with similar goods offered in any other store, you too, will be convinced that our July Sale is one which you cannot afford to miss.
